In the media

Dear Readers,

As we reflect on the past month, the Inclusive Society Institute (ISI) continues to make strides in fostering dialogue and solutions for local and global challenges. We were honoured to be part of a high-level delegation of African Think-Tank Scholars, an invitation extended by the China Center for Contemporary World Studies and the Silk Road Think Tank Association. This opportunity highlighted our shared commitment to collaboration in addressing the complex issues facing our societies.

We hosted a significant meeting in Cape Town with the Foundation for Global Governance and Sustainability (FOGGS) and the Institute for Global Governance (IGD). Our discussions focused on advancing the concept of a Global Resilience Council, a much-needed initiative to address human challenges in an increasingly uncertain world. We believe that through global cooperation, we can build systems that better withstand future crises.

Additionally, we are excited to share our latest publication, "Effectively Addressing Human Challenges: What Would a Global Resilience Council Bring?" This work delves into the role such a council could play in promoting long-term resilience and stability.

As always, our work received widespread coverage in various media. I encourage you to stay informed, engage with our work, and continue supporting our mission to create a more inclusive and resilient society.

Warm regards,

Daryl Swanepoel
